Charles H. Geer.
Charles H. Geer, of this city, well known as a marine engineer, died at his home on Woodman avenue on Thursday morning about 1 o'clock, following an illness of long duration.

Mr. Geer's life has practically all been spent as a marine engineer with the exception of the last few years when he retired from active life. He was born in this city on September 7, 1859, and he has made his home here with the exception of a few years which were passed in New London. He was the son of George W. Geer and Elizabeth Butterfield, and was educated in the schools of this section of New England.

On February 3, 1887, in Norwich, Mr.
Geer was united in marriage with Emily I. Keables of Potter Hill, R. I., by Rev.
John P. Gulliver. As a marine engineer Mr. Geer ran on steamers on the Norfolk line to New York and other sound lines. In the Civil war he was on government transport. He had rounded Cape Horn on steamships bound for San Francisco and the Sandwich Islands.
The later years of his active life he was engineer on government lighters that supplied the light houses on the New England coast. He was very capable in his calling. For a number of years Mr.
Geer had lived a retired life. He is survived by his wife and three children, and Mrs. Calvin L. Swan, all of this

HOW AUSTRALIA MET THE INDUSTRIAL CRISIS

Thursday night closed the Chautauqua season here, and Hon. Crawford Vaughn, ex-premier of Australia, was the speaker on the final night, addressing an audience of over 1,000. His subject was "Australia's Industrial Crisis and How it Was Met."

In his introductory words he referred to the great obligation which Australia felt towards the United States, the ideals of freedom expressed in the constitution of this country, which had been taken as a model for the Australian constitution. Taking up the question of capital and labor, he said that this problem seems to have been emphasized by the war and we seem to have divided into two camps on the subject. The difficulty has been over the distribution of the fruits of industrial effort, the inequitable distribution, for side by side with immense wealth we see appalling poverty.

We are to blame. "We have commercialized labor and you can't expect labor to work on an altruistic basis unless capital is also on an altruistic basis."

What Australia has done is to put the laborer lower, but this has not prevented strikes; indeed, the strike has been used as a political weapon by the minority to bring the majority to its feet.
An affront to democratic institutions.

For one thing that has been accomplished there has been the abolishment of the sweating system which flourished in Australia as it was in the days when Tom Hood wrote his Song of the Shoemaker. The wage boards have been extended to cover every important industry except agriculture. There has been the compulsory arbitration act, by which there were no more strikes, but all the issues involved were brought out into the open and the weight of public opinion said that justice was done.

There has been no abolition of the right to strike, for it was found that if you denied men the right to strike, while they might keep on working, they would strike on the job and furnished fruitful ground for the whippers of I. W. W.-ism.
The effort has been to make the relations as near right as possible by law and hope that the antagonisms would be disipated.

An important thing done since the war has been to get labor back to the land but no absolute solution has been found yet.
There are the question of mortgages banks to lend money, land is allotted on easy terms, bought if necessary, blocked off in plots of five to twenty acres for the working man, and the soldiers have been given farm training with pay and allotted land of the best kind with 42 years to pay for it. Sixty per cent. of the returning soldiers expressed willingness to join this battle to the land movement under the conditions offered.

Some things done in the way of nationalization have proved good there but might not be the same here. The railways have been nationalized as a necessary step in the land development movement. The telephone and telegraph systems have been nationalized with more or less satisfactory results. Some trading enterprises have been nationalized, some of the states but it has never been proposed to nationalize the means of production, distribution and exchange.

In conclusion he said that Australia is watching America and he urged that the people march forward in the spirit of optimism and altruism, for this will win because it has behind it the spirit of the constitution, the spirit of the Sermon on the Mount and of the Golden Rule.

NORWICH WAS FORTUNATE IN FIRES THE LAST YEAR

The year beginning July 1, 1919, and ending June 30, 1920, was a banner year for the city of Norwich. The fire department, considering the need of more motor driven apparatus in the growing sections of the city. There were only 134 alarms, the majority being telephone calls, during the year and a small comparative loss. The largest loss by fire was the one that occurred at Andrews street, the second largest being the fire in the garage on White's Court.

In comparing this year's fires with those of previous years it is found that there were less in the year just closed than in any other year since the inception of 1908. There were 175 fires during the year 1918-1919 while during the year 1919-1920 there were 243 fires, which was the largest year in the history of the department.

Frink's machine suffered only a few and knocked down. Mr. Smith was not seriously hurt.

BASS FISHERMEN HAD LITTLE LUCK FIRST DAY

Several parties from Norwich were out bright and early Thursday after the the high water and abundance of small fish in the waters making the fishing a tiresome enjoyment. A stiff northwesterly wind was blowing across the lake which did not add anything to the pleasure of those in the boats.
